

I am a commercial airline pilot with Southwest Airlines. I think it would be a very bad idea to allow audio cell phone use on our airplanes inflight. It would create a situation where one person using a cell phone could and would prevent a customer from hearing valuable safety briefings from our pilots and flight attendants. Also it would be very disturbing to sit by an individual who is talking the entire flight without any regard for my right to peace and quiet. Allow only data transmissions if you must change the rule. Text messaging and E-mail should be ok.

Bruce Thomas